About The Instructor

Lee Kellogg has been stamping and creating art most of her life. Her teaching experience runs from photography to bird watching, and since 2003 she has been teaching diverse techniques in rubber stamping, mixed media and related arts.

Guadalupe's Fun Rubber Stamps is a small rubber stamp store in Santa Fe, New Mexico that has been around for nearly 25 years. Lee and her husband, Stephen Wust have owned the store since 2003. The store carries a large selection of items for stamping, mixed media and card making.

StampaFe is our own rubber stamp line – an eclectic assortment of social, humorous, religious, and political sayings and images, covering all stripes. StampaFe also proudly offers the the Willard Clark Collection, a line of stamps that feature the work of the late iconic Santa Fe artist.

Open daily, Guadalupe's Fun Rubber Stamps sits in the heart of Santa Fe, a UNESCO Craft and Folk Art City. With museums, galleries, and restaurants abounding, there is plenty for all to see and do here.

How to Register

Call or come by the store, 505-982-9862 or 877-982-9862.

Payment for the workshops is due when registering. If there are no students registered for a class ten days prior to the workshop, it will be cancelled with a full refund. Should you need to cancel your reservation less than 30 days prior to the workshop date, a $30 fee will be withheld. More than 30 days prior, a full refund will be given.

Class sizes are limited and may fill fast. Classes will be at Guadalupe's Fun Rubber Stamps location unless otherwise specified.

Traveling to Santa Fe and need help with lodging? We can advise on the local hotels; give us a call.

Full day classes include an hour lunch break; lunch is on your own. There are a variety of restaurants within easy walking distance of Guadalupe's Fun Rubber Stamps.

A materials list will be provided in your registration information.
